

West Coast sifts East Coast menu

May 31, 2015

Jonathan Kauffman

San Franciscans have been weathering complaints about our bagels and thin-crust pizzas for so long we've given up trying to please expat New Yorkers.

But East Coast nostalgia isn't limited to wistful Manhattanites. Local chefs and food truck owners are trying to hook the Bay Area on the iconic dishes of their childhoods, whether they come from Maine or Maryland.

Here are some of the more successful ones.

Lobster roll

Lobster Me

Several lobster roll trucks circumnavigate the Bay Area, but this restaurant chain based in Portland, Maine, one-ups them with permanent seats and a lobster-centric menu.

Coming soon to Westfield San Francisco, 865 Market St., San Francisco;
www.lobsterme.com